The basic principle of this theory is that the state is an end and the individual is a means. According to Hegel, the individual can perfect himself only in the state.

Everything is neither within the state, nothing outside nor against it. The supporters of this theory also believe that the state is a person and has a will of his own.

The Idealistic Theory of State | Study Lecture Notes

The state is a social institution, forced by a victorious group of men on a defeated group, with no other purpose than the economic exploitation of the vanquished by the victors. This view is utterly untenable. It confuses the logical concept of a class with some subordinate species

state of nature | Definition, Theories, & Facts | Britannica

In Marx's 1843 Critique of Hegel's Philosophy of Right, his basic conception is that the state and civil society are separate. However, he already saw some limitations to that model, arguing: The political state everywhere needs the guarantee of spheres lying outside it. He as yet was saying nothing about the abolition of private property, does not express a developed theory of class, and "the solution [he offers] to the problem of the state/civil society separation is a purely political ...
